EXEMPTION BOARD

WILL NEED TO ISSUE THIRD AND POSSIBLY FOURTH CALL TO FILL QUOTA

Seventeen young men appeared before the local board for exemption district No. 7 for examination on Saturday afternoon, and all were passed, but only two of the number did not file claims for exemption.

The board completed its labors Saturday afternoon, so far as examinations for the draft were concerned; but 53 are still lacking to make up the quota for this district, and it was the opinion of the members when they adjourned that another call would be issued almost at once. This will make the third call for this district; but unless the third call is more successful than the two preceding ones, it may be necessary to issue a fourth, unless a more rigid rule is adopted by the board touching exemptions, and this was more than hinted at on Saturday.

The quota for district No. 7 calls for 125 for the draft, to which is to be added ten per cent. over the quota, as alternates, or 13 in all, which would bring the total up to 138. In the two calls that have been made, 520 were summoned to appear before the board; but out of the number that presented themselves, only 73 were finally secured for service, the first call yielding 28, and the second 37, while 8 claims were disallowed. To be added to this total are possibly 12 more, belonging to this district, distributed in the army and navy, and who were not included in the first or second call, which would bring the total up to 85, leaving a balance of 53 still to be secured.

To what extent this number will be reduced after the board has passed upon the claims for exemption remains to be seen, though opinion on the subject on Saturday afternoon was rather strong, and estimates varied all the way from 10 to 15 per cent. The board, however, will determine each case purely on its merits.

Provost Marshal General Crowder has ruled that persons neglecting to appear for examination will be accepted automatically, and that the privilege of claiming exemption will be denied. In accordance with this decision, Attorney General Gregory renewed instructions Saturday night, that drafted men who fail to report for service will be classed and punished as deserters, and these instructions were sent to United States District Attorneys and agents of the Department of Justice.

Following is the list of the young men who appeared before the board Saturday afternoon, the two who did not file claims for exemption being distinguished by a star before their names:

Judson Douglass, Michigan and Berkshire, La Canada.

Henry Marple, 407 N. Brand Blvd., Tropico.

Allen F. Kipper, 1620 Burchett St., Casa Verdugo.

Joseph G. Hingston, Oakendale Pl., La Crescenta.

Noble J. Ripley, 527 La Bree Ct., Tropico.

Francis M. Steele, Honolulu and L. A. avenue, La Crescenta.

George W. Brown, 1708 W. Ave. 56, Los Angeles.

Anthony E. Pendl, 1616 Panama, Los Angeles.

Joseph G. Finley, 731 Eagle Rock Ave., Los Angeles.

Earl C. Dick, 1517 Hillandale, Los Angeles.

James Carpi, 301 S. Glendale Ave., Tropico.

Otto Martin Clinton, 1516 Ruth street, Glendale.

Lewis A. Pendleton, Burbank.

*Frank Philip Begue, RFD II, Box 288, Los Angeles.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY

"Gee, how it grows!" That was the exclamation of a young Glendalian regarding the big "serpent cucumber" in the Chamber of Commerce window this morning. Calling to it the wondering attention of a companion, he continued: "When I saw it the first of last week, it was only about two feet long. Now it's grown a tail longer than that, right here in this window" "What do you know about that?" his comrade did reply.

Of course that seems an incredible statement about the marvelous cucumber, growing sans root, sans vine, sans earth, sans anything except hot air. But the question is, if that cucumber did not grow as alleged, how did the boy know it?

COAST ARTILLERY

SUNDAY VISITOR AT LOWER RESERVATION FT. McARTHUR DESCRIBES CAMP

When it became generally known that visitors would be permitted Sunday afternoon at the encampment at the Lower Reservation, Ft. McArthur, the fathers, mothers, wives and sweethearts who had bidden a brave but tearful good-bye to the troops of the Coast Artillery as they marched proudly through the city streets last Tuesday, made haste to avail themselves of the opportunity to visit the boys once more. At as early an hour as the rules would permit, the boulevards leading to San Pedro were alive with automobiles, all bound for Ft. McArthur, and the Pacific Electric could not have even flaunted the S. R. O. (standing room only) sign.

The tonneaus in almost every case were packed to the limit with friends and supplies for the boys, and the passengers on the electric cars carried bundles of newspapers and magazines and mysterious packages which looked extremely like chocolate creams and other toothsome dainties.

Arriving at the ground it was a pleasure to see a fine young fellow rush out to meet the big auto loaded with father, mother and the children and sometimes the family pet; or waiting for the local or jitney that brought the passengers from the big red city cars to the encampment, the same scene was enacted. And when leaving time came the same stalwart young fellows put their beloved home folks into the auto and if necessary cranked it and sent them off with a smile and a wave of the hand.

The 21st Co. of the Coast Artillery in which most of the Glendale boys are enlisted, was sent on guard at Dead Man's Island on Friday. Dead Man's Island is a barren island with yellow clay steeps at the entrance to the inner harbor, and connected with the mainland by a mile and a half of sand. No provision had been made to reach it. No jitney or car, and a boat hired would not have been allowed to land.

Although it was known that the 21st had been transferred to Dead Man's Island, yet relatives and friends hoped that the boys might be permitted to come over to the Lower Reservation Sunday afternoon, and a number went down on the chance. In this they were disappointed as the 21st evidently did not have leave.

The brown canvas city which sprang up like the mushroom in a night is down near the waters of the inner harbor on a comparatively level field and is still in the making and lacking in equipment.

Some of the men are not provided with cots and are sleeping on straw pallets covered with blankets, but the mess tents seem to be in good shape.

Chief Gunner Knight of Glendale, however, was in camp and showed numberless courtesies to the Glendale

MRS. McGREGOR APPOINTED

Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Colson, 1516 Burchett street, have received word that their daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth McGregor, has been appointed Secretary of Class Instruction of the Bureau of University of California. Extension Division. She has had charge of the San Francisco office during the past year but now takes over the entire work of the northern part of the State. She succeeds Miss Nadine Crump, who has been appointed to inaugurate the Extension work in Southern California, with headquarters in the Union League building, Los Angeles. It will be remembered that Mrs. McGregor was down in this part of the State a few weeks ago, planning lectures, and while in Glendale, arranged for the coming of Prof. Frederic Monson, who is to deliver a course at the high school this fall.

CHILDREN'S FIESTA

A happy afternoon was spent one day last week by all the children in the neighborhood of Third and Central avenue, when Billy Justema held a fiesta in his yard for the benefit of the Children of America's Relief Fund. The booths were gaily decorated and each youngster came with pocket full of pennies, each article being a penny.

Billy sold pictures which he had drawn or painted; Evelyn Gregg sold home-made candy and lemonade; Marjorie Yarick sold old magazines; Marjorie Temple conducted a fish pond, and Virginia Hunchberger told fortunes. As a result, $2.22 will be turned over to Mr. R. D. White to add to the fund which the school children send abroad to feed the starving children.

ITALY IN NEW OFFENSIVE

LAUNCHES BIG DRIVE ON AUSTRIAN LINE ON ITALIAN FRONT OF NINETY MILES

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

ROME, August 20.—Italy is waging a determined offensive against the Austrian line from the Adriatic to the Alps. Fighting of great magnitude is in progress. The blow will probably be the hardest Italy has yet struck. Early reports show that the initial success was won by Gen. Cadorna's troops. The offensive followed days of artillery preparation and was launched on an entire Italian front of 90 miles.

EXEMPTION BOARD MEMBERS SENTENCED

MUST SERVE TWO YEARS IN FEDERAL PRISON FOR TAKING MONEY FROM DRAFTED MEN

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

NEW YORK, August 20.—Pleading guilty to charges of conspiracy to violate the draft law, Dr. Samuel J. Bernfield and Louis I. Cherey, ousted members of the exemption board in District 99, were sentenced this morning to two years in the federal prison at Atlanta and fined $10,000 each. Both fines were remitted at the request of U. S. Attorney Knox, who said the United States did not care to accept tainted money. Federal Judge Manton characterized the offense as "a most heinous one." Bernfield and Cherey accepted money from drafted men to exempt them. The penalty imposed was the maximum.

FIGHTING AT VERDUN

TERRIBLE CONFLICT NEARING CLIMAX ON FRONT OF TWELVE MILES AROUND VERDUN

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

PARIS, August 20.—A new and terrible battle is reaching a climax around the bloody field of Verdun. Officials statements say, "Fighting has developed to our advantage." The conflict extends over a front of twelve miles.

BRITISH GAIN BY USE OF SMOKE DEVICE

FORCE CONTINUED RETREAT OF GERMAN LINES NEAR YPRES BY THE USE OF TANKS

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

LONDON, August 20.—By sheer weight of superior steel the British forced the continued recession of the German line in the Ypres-Poelkapelle sector. The use of tanks equipped with smoke devices which permitted the war machine to progress enveloped in a thick black fog helped the new gains.

ALLIES WILL DISCUSS PEACE PROPOSAL

NO FORMAL ANSWER WILL BE GIVEN POPE'S PEACE PROPOSAL UNTIL ALLIED NATIONS CONFER

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

LONDON, August 20.—A conference of all the Allied nations will be held before any definite response to the Pope's peace note is given, it was announced this afternoon. It is not known whether any actual conference has been called.

WILL NAME COAL DICTATOR

PRESIDENT WILL APPOINT INDIVIDUAL TO HAVE SOLE AUTHORITY IN FIXING PRICE OF COAL

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, August 20.—A coal dictator is to be named for the United States within twenty-four hours by President Wilson, officials say. It is known that the new official will have sole responsibility and power. He will fix prices on coal from the mine to the consumer.

G. A. R. REUNION

BETWEEN 8,000 and 10,000 VETERANS GATHER AT BOSTON FOR NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

BOSTON, August 20.—Between 8,000 and 10,000 G. A. R. veterans are here to-day for their National Reunion and Encampment. Members of the Navy Medal Honor League, which will hold its convention in conjunction with the Grand Army, began arriving yesterday and most of them were here this morning, from all parts of the country. With this country on the eve of active military participation in the war, the Grand Army reunion has taken on a new and serious significance. It is probable that some plan for co-ordinating the work of the Grand Army in aiding the country in ways to be decided on will be one important result of the gathering of the veterans.

A GROWING BUSINESS

GROSE VULCANIZING COMPANY PLANT IS BEING IMPROVED DAILY

To make two blades of grass grow where only one blade grew before, is to be something of a success; it is to be a creator, and if it is true in a blade of grass, the same is true in the realm of business. When J. L. Grose, of the Grose Vulcanizing Company, began business a few months ago at 1011 West Broadway, there was not even the blade of grass. He had bought out a business that was in the hands of the creditors, or rather he bought a stook of goods and things, and at the same time came into possession of a lot of truck that was of no value to any one except perhaps to the junkman. More than that, a water hydrant is right in front of his door, and a city ordinance prohibits the standing of an automobile within 20 feet of a hydrant, so that even the city was against him. Mr. Grose's business is with automobiles: he furnishes them with tires, but an automobile can not land before his door.

But Mr. Grose is a philosopher. He accepted the situation merely as incidental and settled down to work to create business. First he removed the truck and dust, cleaned up the alley and his back yard, put in new stock and equipment, gave his place the ship-shape appearance of business—and began to do business.

Certain rules are cardinal with him. He must do a good job; he must satisfy his customer, and he is not in business merely to separate a customer from his money. He advises the customer what is the best thing for him to do, although it means to Mr. Grose the loss of several dollars. It is not loss, however; rather is it bread cast upon the waters. It returns to him later from a satisfied customer; it returns to him manyfold, in business from others, to whom the satisfied customer has spoken about him. To still further accommodate his customers, Mr. Grose leaves 100 pounds of compressed air in his tank in the rear, for the use of his customers in the night-time, and they have also access to free water.

Mr. Grose's business has grown amazingly, so much so that he has been obliged to extend his plant from time to time and to increase the number of his force. He has to-day probably the most completely equipped vulcanizing concern in the San Fernando Valley; it will soon be equal to any in Los Angeles, and he proposes to make it the best in Southern California, both as a vulcanizing plant and a salesroom of the best tires on the market.

He is about to make an extension in the rear, the equipment for which will cost about $1,000; but he is constantly adding new devices, all of which means that the Grose Vulcanizing Company is a great and growing success.

RED CROSS FRENCH CLASS

Ladies attending the Red Cross French class have been given the following striking announcement to commit to memory for Wednesday, August 22. This soul-stirring document has been posted up extensively throughout France as a reminder to patriotic Frenchmen.

Francais! Ton sol est souille.

Qu'as-tu fait hier?

Que feras-tu aujourd' hui et demain—pour contribuer a le liberer?

Reponds aux Morts qui t'interrogent.

Paix par la VICTOIRE seulement.

Class meets as usual Wednesday at 3:30, at 1222 Milford street. No more pupils will be admitted to this Wednesday class after this week, as the pupils are progressing rapidly and should not be held back by newcomers.

OPENING OF BROADWAY

The re-assessment for the opening and widening of Broadway has been approved by the Board of Trustees and filed with the Superintendent of Streets in the Engineer's office. All assessments are payable within 30 days from the 17th of this month. Delinquents will then be advertised and the property sold within twenty days.

LAND FOR POTATOES

Mrs. Nanno Woods announces that the southwest corner of Glendale avenue and Chestnut street will be placed at the disposal of any person wishing to grow potatoes this fall. The owner, John E. Sherlock of Los Angeles, in making this generous offer of the free use of his land, states that water is already piped to the lot. Phone Sunset Glendale 394.

NEED FACTORIES

DR. HARROWER WOULD ENCOURAGE ESTABLISHMENT OF INDUSTRIES HERE

August 20, 1917.

Editor Glendale Evening News,
Glendale, Cal.

Dear Sir:

Is there any objection to the location of manufacturing establishments in Glendale?

The growth and prosperity of a city is largely dependent upon the business that may be carried on therein. The most useful kind of business is that which is productive; and the factory is invariably a better asset than the store for reasons which all business men know: The factory produces something, creating values; while the store merely distributes it, collecting a profit.

The writer is wondering why Glendale is so far behind some of its neighboring cities in this particular respect. There are very few businesses here that are producing. We have perhaps half a dozen such in town with payrolls which probably would not amount to very many hundreds of dollars a week.

The Henry-Brown Company, recently located here, is producing a splendid line of soft drinks which deserve a wide sale in the city and, as I understand, has already created quite a demand in outside territory.

Mr. Williams is doing an excellent thing for his own business as well as for the town in producing apparel "Made in Glendale," and while I have no need for such things personally, he has my best wishes that he may be able to compete favorably with his out-of-town competitors.

Our well equipped ice factory is supplying a large share of the trade in Glendale and I am told its business extends quite a number of miles outside the city limits.

Recently a bakery has been established which is making bread and more of it is sold outside of Glendale than in the city itself. We haven't "got onto the fact" that there is a first class wholesale baker in our midst.

There is but one other producing business of which I have knowledge—the Burd Cookie Co., whose plant is in an inconspicuous corner of town, but in which I learn many thousands of cookies are made each day, the bulk of which is sold outside of this city.

There is plenty of territory and opportunities and it seems a shame that more aggressive production—and by production I mean taking an article and adding to its value by effort and then making it available in trade—is not attempted in our midst. Would it not be proper to invite the Chamber of Commerce, through its aggressive Secretary, to give us a census of manufacturers in our city and to foster the establishment of several industries in our midst?

Respectfully yours,
HENRY R. HARROWER, M. D.

Dr. Harrower is to be commended for his public spirit in calling attention to the need of industries in Glendale, but in enumerating those we already have he has omitted some of our most important manufacturing concerns.

The Glendale Chemical Company, of which C. E. Stanley is the proprietor, is located at 336 Everett street. This company is extensively engaged in the manufacture of bluing, household ammonia and other products which are sold to dealers in Los Angeles in large quantities. This company also manufactures "Oakure," a remedy for poison oak, which Mr. Stanley himself originated.

The Glendale Mill, 220 Geneva street, conducts a manufacturing business. The company manufactures the Merit screen, which is much in demand as a high-class product and is sold to wholesalers. In addition the Glendale Mill does high-class cabinet work and manufactures cedar chests, etc.

Hoffer & McBain, located at 245 South Glendale avenue, are engaged in manufacturing cheese on a large scale. Their products may be found in nearly every store in Los Angeles carrying such goods. This firm also manufactures macaroons for the wholesale trade.

The Glendale Laundry, while not a factory, is an industry that should not be overlooked. The plant is one of the best in Southern California and the weekly payroll amounts to several hundred dollars.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Biddison of the San Gabriel Valley were week-end guests of their daughter, Mrs. H. L. Perkins of 1507 Lomita avenue.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO TEACH WAR ECONOMY

Uncle Sam has just recruited and trained an army of 800,000 American boys and girls, who will be on duty at state and county fairs everywhere this fall. Their work now consists of helping their fathers and mothers preserve, pickle, dry and can the enormous surplus of America's war gardens. Their work at the fairs will consist of practical demonstration of methods.

It is estimated that this juvenile army will exhibits its prowess and products to about 20,000,000 Americans. They will be the principal attraction at the series of Food Training Camps the Department of Agriculture is organizing for every section of the country for late August, September and October.

The boys and girls in this great food drive are the members of the thousands of Boys' and Girls' clubs organized by and working under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture. The national headquarters is at Washington with a specialist of the juvenile extension department in charge.

Each day at the Food Training camps the children will can and dry food products in different ways, giving the public a correct idea as to how it should be done. The particular boys and girls who will demonstrate for the state colleges of agriculture and for the government, are now being chosen through a series of competitive tests in practically every community in the country. These contests are being held in the schools, at community fairs and picnics, and at other public gatherings. Only the winners in the larger local contests, who have shown by their work that they are capable of discharging the tasks the government will give them, will be permitted to demonstrate at the Food Training Camps.

In addition to this the girls will conduct exhibits and demonstrations on home baking, cooking, methods of arranging the canned and preserved foods into balanced menus for the family, efficient home management, and garment making.

The boys in addition to their work in the field of canning and drying, will conduct exhibits on poultry husbandry, and the raising of farm crops, and demonstrations with farm animals such as calves, pigs, sheep and horses.

MEET LAWLESSNESS WITH LAW

Before we try to solve the puzzling problem of what to do with the I. W. W. let us decide what not to do with him.

Let us not hang or shoot the I. W. W. without due process of the law. The complaint against the irresponsible trouble breeder is, that his operations are opposed to law and order. Let us not, then, make a mockery of law and order in punishing him for his offense against it. By ignoring law in getting at him we justify his contention that there is no law worth observing when the interests of the moment seem to point toward violation.

Let us not be content with the futile expedient of purchasing temporary immunity from trouble by passing along our tough customers to another community. The transfer affords no pretense of a settlement of the main question. It merely changes the scene of a tussle with it. If the "vag" is passed from one community to another, each seeing that he eats and sleeps while in its jurisdiction, a continuous round of pleasure opens for him. Indefinite continuance of that sort of thing would come pretty close to his ideal of existence.

There should be a law, preferably a federal law, calling for restraint of able-bodied men who travel from state to state without means of support, unwilling to work when offered work at current wages. It has been suggested frequently that there is no way of enforcing such a law. Is this a fact? It is true at the outset that thousands, perhaps tens of thousands, of itinerant idlers might scoff at the effort to put them to work. Could not the federal government deal with such an emergency? Over in Europe in every belligerent country there are tens of thousands of men whom the government is unwilling to trust at large during the war. These men are interned in huge concentration camps. Some of them have been in confinement now for three years. It costs something to keep up these concentration camps, but the confinement of their occupants is held to be essential to the public security. Whatever is really essential to the public safety is worth more than it costs in cash.

Does anybody suppose hundreds of thousands or even tens of thousands of able-bodied men in this country would prefer the rigors of indefinite confinement in a rough penal camp to the relative advantages of free and useful citizenship? It seems wholly unlikely. The unwilling worker of to-day is able to swamp cities and even states which are not prepared to deal with the difficulties of disciplining him in wholesale numbers. The mere fact that the federal government was prepared to deal with vagrancy on any scale in which it might develop must serve as a tremendous deterrent to organized law defiance.

Nothing is ever settled until it is settled right. The question of dealing with the itinerant vagrant will never be answered adequately until the vagrant is shown a reasonable law which he must observe or incur a practicable punishment.—Sioux City Journal.

ARGUMENT FOR THE NAVY

The navy is no place for men who like to eat a big meal and then sit down for a couple of hours to think about it; the navy is no place for men whose chief aim is to be comfortable and to have an easy time. The navy is the place for men who are young in spirit, no matter how long ago they were born; it is the place for young men who want to do something and see something and be something, and who are willing to pay for the chance by doing a fair day's work each day, according to the rules laid down. On some days a man in the navy has to do more work than he would do in almost any other calling; but during a year he does not work more than eight hours a day on the average.

Whether a man is an admiral or an ordinary seaman, he must endure the hardships and brave the perils of the sea; he must get wet sometimes and seasick sometimes, and sometimes see death and disaster apparently only a hairs' breadth away. But nowhere else can he get so big and buoyant an idea of life as on the ocean; nowhere else can he get so big and buoyant an idea of companionship as in a man-of-war; nowhere except in the navy can he have such a number and variety of experiences, see so many kinds of scenery, do so many kinds of things, gather so many recollections. In no other life can a man be so many kinds of a man as in the navy.

If a man makes the navy his whole career and follows its path through life, taking good with bad and making the best of both, and if he keeps his eyes and ears and his mind open, he will have a wealth of experiences and memories that a life in no other calling would give him. And underlying all this will be the consciousness that, to the extent of his abilities, he lived for the service of his country.—Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, in the Youth's Companion.

McADOO'S SIGNATURE ON WORLD'S LARGEST CHECK

The largest check ever issued in the world has been returned to the United States Treasury, paid and canceled. The check for two hundred million dollars was signed by Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo, and represented the first payment on the loan of the United States to Great Britain.

Other large checks which have been signed by Secretary McAdoo within the last six months are one for $100,000,000 to France and one for $100,000,000 to Italy. Numerous other smaller checks ranging from $1,000,000 to $75,000,000 have been signed as loans to our allies.

Previous to January, 1917, the largest check that had ever been signed by a Secretary of the Treasury of the United States was one for $40,000,000 in payment for the rights of the French Panama Canal Company for the privilege of constructing the Panama Canal. The next largest check was for $25,000,000 in payment for the Danish West Indies.

When the treaty ceding the islands to the United States was signed it contained a clause calling for payment of the entire amount in gold. When it came time for the Danish minister to collect for the islands, the Treasury was ready to make the payment in gold, but the perplexed minister found that there were hardly enough wagons in Washington to haul $25,000,000 in gold, and finally, after much cabling between officials, he consented to take a draft for the amount, to be placed at the credit of his government.

FAMILY ALLOWANCE, INDEMNITY, AND INSURANCE FOR OUR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS—THE DUTY OF A JUST GOVERNMENT

By W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury

The number of claims for exemption from military duty under the draft law has caused a painful impression in many quarters, but after all, does not the fact that no provision has yet been made by the Government for the support of the wives and children, mothers or fathers, of the men who have been drafted explain many of these claims for exemption?

Under the draft law the Government has the power to require every able-bodied man between 21 and 31 years of age to perform military duty. Thousands of the drafted men are wage-earners who married years ago and are the sole support of dependent families. So long as the Government has made no provision for the care of these dependents, it is natural that such drafted men should seek to protect their loved ones by staying at home. I am sure that if the Congress should promptly enact the pending war insurance bill, which makes definite allowances for the support of the dependent wives and children, fathers or mothers, of our soldiers and sailors, claims for exemption on that score will cease. This is an imperative duty of the Government. We cannot deprive helpless women and children of the support of the wage-earner by forcing him into the military service of the country unless the Government substitutes itself as their support.

Imagine the emotions of the man who is called into the military service of his country with full knowledge that his loved ones are left without means of support and may be reduced to want unless the charity of the community in which they live comes to their relief. It would be nothing less than a crime for a rich and just Government to treat its fighting men so heartlessly and to subject their dependent wives and children, who are unable to fight, to greater suffering than if they could fight.

The morale of an army is as essential to its effective fighting power as guns, ammunition and other instrumentalities of war. Of equal importance is the morale of the civil population which must support the armies in the field. We cannot have this essential morale unless the Nation comforts the men in the ranks with the knowledge that everything possible will be done for them and their families, and renders to the civil population at home the assistance which will make it most effective in upholding the government and the fighting forces.

STUDY ENGINEERING

Hardly more than half the usual number of young Americans are now enrolled as students of engineering, where there should be twice the usual number, for the larger part of the civilized world will have to be reconstructed after the war. Industrial plants, bridges, railroads are going to rack and ruin even when they escape destruction. War overworks them and prevents repair. If the war lasts two years even America will have felt the strain. The demand for engineers will greatly exceed the supply.

Miss Birdie Shropshire returned Saturday from an outing spent at Balboa Beach, where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. V. M. Tresslar at their cottage. The cottage was on an island and could only be reached by boat and Miss Birdie is nursing a good case of sunburn in consequence of the exposure to the constant reflection of the sun on the water.

CANFIELD'S HOME

A. W. Canfield is about to erect a $4,000 home at 670 Verdugo Canyon road in the Verdugo Canyon district. It will be a two-story, frame building and will include all modern improvements. Mr. Canfield has already spent $1,000 on servants quarters. J. J. Burke of Tropico drew the plans. The grounds cover two acres. Mr. Canfield, who is a New York man, has lived here before in North Glendale. Now he intends to make this his permanent residence.

WHY STUDY FRENCH?

1. Because it will help to increase the bond of sympathy, moral and intellectual, between us and our French and Belgian allies.
2. Because it will help better to follow the careers of husbands, sons and brothers now training in America or fighting "somewhere in France."
3. Because it will help to more intelligent appreciation of current magazine articles, now teeming with French words and phrases.
4. Because for many years to come France and Belgium will be the goal and shrine of thousands of American travelers.
5. Because the business world of America will in future be influenced by vastly increased commercial transactions with France.

THE MODERN THERMOMETER

The first modern thermometer, in which mercury was used, was the invention of Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit, a German natural philosopher, who died September 16, 1736, at the age of fifty. Fahrenheit was a native of Danzig, and failed as a merchant before he turned his attention to the making of thermometers. At first he used spirits of wine in the tubes, but was dissatisfied with the result, and then used mercury with great success. He opened a shop in Amsterdam, and from there his instruments soon spread throughout the world. The scale suggested by Fahrenheit is still in general use in a large part of the world, although the centigrade thermometer of Celsius, of Stockholm, offered a more rational graduation, and in France Reaumur proposed another graduation, which was adopted in that country. In England and America, however, Fahrenheit is a household word.—Lutheran Young People.

AMBULANCE PILLOW REPORT

There has been material cut this week sufficient to stuff about six pillows, but we have been shorter of help than ever before since we started work here. There are only two weeks more of work this summer and we wish very much to turn out an especially large number of pillows to finish up on.

We have fully a ton of paper which will be taken in to the wholesale house this week free of charge, so that the Red Cross will be saved cartage and profit. Friday we had a hard time getting enough boys to gather and tie the papers, so we had to call on the girls. They responded nobly, but it is not girls' work so they found it pretty hard.

It happened aboard a diner on an Eastern road, and the hero was the waiter, whose manner alone was proof sufficient that he lived to make life brighter and fairer to his patrons.

"Waiter," said a lone traveler, as he sat down at one of the little tables, "bring me grapefruit, hot toast, coffee, and two poached eggs."

"Kunnel," stated the waiter, bending forward confidentially, and speaking under his breath, "'scuse me, suh, but effen I wuz you I'd tek somethin' else this mawnin' fur breakfas'. I'm feared I can't reckermend the aigs."

"What's wrong with them, aren't they fresh, or what?" asked the white man.

"Well," said the darky, "they mout be fresh so fur as I knows. But to tell you the truf, sur, we ain't got no aigs to-day."

BRITISH TALK OF EVERYTHING BUT WAR WHILE FIGHTING

By William Philip Sims

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, July 30 (By Mail)—People can get used to anything, even to this business of war. Were it not so, those who have to keep on killing Germans month in and month out, would go mad and bite somebody.

To-day I was out among the guns pounding the Germans to pieces in the neighborhood of Lens. It was tea time. Overhead seven British planes were winging past on their way to a wrestling match with the enemy in the clouds. Now and then a six-inch shell exploded in the vicinity of the British batteries.

Under a scrap of canvas serving as shelter from the midsummer sun, sat a Canadian major, commander of a battery of howitzers. He was bareheaded. On a wooden hand-grenade packing case was a cup of tea. By it lay a slice of buttered bread. The major was in his shirt sleeves. In his hands was a book and a copying leadpencil.

Jotting something down in the book the major laid it face down on the case and took up the slice of buttered bread, bit off a mouthful and chewed away for some 30 seconds, then called out to one of his gun-crews nearby:

"Number Two! Four seven five nine!"

No. 2 crew lifted a huge shell into the howitzer's breech, closed and locked the breechlock; sighted and stood by, one of the men holding the lanyard taut in his right hand. In his left he held a piece of bread.

Swallowing a gulp of tea the major picked up his gunnery book and casually ordered:

The howitzer next to No. 2 bellowed so the country 'round about echoed and rocked to its thunder. The major set down some figures and refreshed himself with more tea and bread.

"Whatcher want now?" an ammunition tender growled. He was busy chewing and opening a can of some sort of tinned food.

"Where's that jam?" said the lanyard chap.

"Jam?" queried Bill as he worked away. "What jam? You mean the rhubarb jam?"

"Naw!" replied the lanyarder, "not the rhubarb jam; the strawberry jam. I'm fed up on that stringy rhubarb jam."

"Number One!" bawled out the major. "Six O five three." Then after a swallow from the enameled cup: "Number Two! Fire!"

No. 2 blazed away and a huge shell tore through the air screaming in terrifying fashion and likely enough it found its mark and tore to shreds a dozen dupes of the Kaiser.

"Yes," said the Canadian gunner who had pulled the trigger, "that was certainly some game? Two men out, man on third, score tied and the ninth inning. Old Ty Cobb was at the bat with two strikes on him. Ty whaled away at it and—"

"Number Two!" shouted the officer. "Four seven five eight!" Then: "By Godfrey!" he murmured to himself, "wonder where'n the devil they got this butter" "Number One! Fire!"

Again the howitzer shivered and leapt, and, as the recoil threw it back into position, Bill came up with a tin plate in his hand.

"Here, sour face," he said to the lanyard puller, "here's your bloomin' jam. Shall I fetch you a finger-bowl?"

And so the manslaughter went on. Dispassionately and as coolly these men feed and fire their howitzers. When lunch time comes they may knock off work for a time and eat it comfortably, sitting on a pile of shells any one of which contains enough explosive to blow up the Woolworth building. Or if for any reason it is necessary to keep on firing, the gunners eat and talk and fire the guns without a pause.

They seldom talk about the war. Rather they tell their experiences the last time they went on leave. They talk about the shows they saw, the good things they had to eat, the pretty girls they met, what they are going to do when the war is over and the rest.

In the trenches it is precisely the same. Between raids, dodging trench-mortar stuff, they play checkers and other games, write letters, have their tea and talk about food and girls and shows and things.

Of course these men do not love the war. Nobody loves the war. But they are game and, the Prussians having commenced the war, are going to see it through. And the way to see it through is to make the best of things, to get used to it all and quit worrying. Sprinkle the enemy with shot with one hand and pass the jam with the other. That is the only way. The French have found it. So have the British. The Americans will have to—and will.

A firm of shirt makers at Yokohama, Japan, manufactures great quantities of paper shirts. The material is made from the bark of the mulberry tree, and is soft, warm, and durable. Instead of reducing this fabric to a pulp, water only makes the goods tougher and more durable. The buttonholes in these paper shirts are reinforced with linen, otherwise the shirts are made to pattern and can be seamed and hemmed like any other shirts.—Exchange.

ME UND GOTT

Gott, Gott, dear Gott, attention blease; your pardner Wilhelm's here
And has a word or two to say into your private ear;
So turn all oders under now, and listen vell to me,
For vat I says concerns me much, meinself and Chermany.

You know, dear Gott, I vas your friendt, and from mine hour of birth
I let you rule der heffen vile I rules o'er der earth.
Und ven I tells mine soldiers of bygone battle days,
I always splits der glory und gives you half der praise.

In effery way I try to prove mine heart to you vas true,
Und only claim mine honest share in great deeds vat we do.
You could not had a better frient in sky, on land or sea
As Wilhelm Kaiser, No. 2, der lord of Chermany.

So vat I ask, dear Gott, is dis; dat ve should be good frients,
Und you should help me send mine foes to meet der bitter ends.
If you, dear, Gott, will dis me do, I'll noddings ask again,
Unt me unt You will partners be, forever unt amen.

But listen, Gott, it must be quick, to me your help you send,
Or else I haf to stop attack und only play defend.
So four and twenty hours I gif to make der allies run,
Und put me safe, into mine blace, der middle of der sun.

But if you don't, I den must think, yours is a hostile act,
Und den, you bet, I'll have revenge, I'll tell the vorld der fact,
Den var at once I vill declare, und in mine anger rise,
Und send mine Zeppelins to vage a fight up in der skies.

Dis ultimatum now, dear Gott, is von of many more;
My mind is settled up to clean der whole vorld off der floor,
Because you vas mine partner, von extra chance is giffen,
So help at vonce, or else I'll be der Emperor of Heffen.

THE AUCTION

Good health was put up at auction. "What am I offered," cried the auctioneer, "for this fine parcel of good health, warranted to last for threescore years and ten?"

"I offer all these pills and drugs," cried a woman with a hamper of bottles and boxes.

The auctioneer shook his head impatiently. "Who bids more?" he asked.

"I offer money," shouted a portly banker. "I bid a million dollars in gold," and he pointed to a bank van which he had brought with him.

The auctioneer shook his head still more vigorously. "Who bids more?" he cried.

A quiet young fellow stood near, and said in a firm voice, "I bid intelligence and painstaking."

"Going—going—and gone to the last bidder!" the auctioneer shouted. "And may you, young man, make a good use of your good bargain."—Aesop Jones, in C. E. World.

It was decided that Mr. Wright must administer a stern lecture to his four-year-old daughter Florence. The little girl had been naughty, but she did not seem to appreciate the fact, and Mr. Wright undertook a scolding.

He hated to make the tender little heart ache and to see the dear child cry, but he forced himself to speak judiciously and severely. He recounted her misdeeds, and explained the why and wherefore of his stern rebuke.

Finally Mr. Wright paused for breath, and also to hear the small culprit acknowledge her error. The scolding was never continued. Florence turned a face beaming with admiration to her mother, and said innocently:

"Isn't papa interesting?"—Tit-Bits.

A small, meek country negro, who had always lived on one place near Frankfort, Kentucky, married a big, domineering woman, and very soon afterward moved into town, where an old friend met him on the street.

"Hello, Gabe," he said, "what made you move to town? I thought you like country life."

"Well, Mistah Franklin," explained Gabe. "I uster lak de country. But mah wife she didn't lak it—and I've done got so dat when she don't lak a thing I jest natchelly hates it."—Saturday Evening Post.

A young housewife was showing a new and inexperienced colored maid around the house, explaining the various duties that would be hers. In an upper hall they came suddenly to the head of the back stairs, and the lady said:

"Nancy, you will go down this way, always!" And with that the little mistress slipped and tumbled, going all the way down with many lurches and bumps.

The new maid was aghast.

"My lan', missy; Ah'm afraid Ah won't suit you-all. Dat a-way ob goin' downstairs am a heap too strenuous fo' me."—Woman's Home Companion.

COAST ARTILLERY

contingent. Those who stayed to guard mount were rewarded by seeing how quickly the raw material is being turned into trained soldiers. To any one not familiar with the ceremony, it is a very interesting one.

The parade ground is as yet rough and uneven, but when the company had been put through the manual of arms, the guns had been inspected and the band had crossed the parade in fours and single file to the inspiring strains of Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes Forever," and the company marched away to relieve guard, the large crowd scattered to view the sights of the camp. The mess and cook tents seemed to be the center of attraction, and savory smells made the visitors think of home and dinner.

An inquisitive matron of the party peered through the screen of one of the cook houses and said to the smiling chef, "It smells good," and was invited to come in and inspect the supper. Upon accepting the invitation, the visitors were shown the convenient low camp stove heated with huge gas flames. Immense pans of stewed tomatoes, meat and potato stew and gallons of hot coffee were in preparation for the 125 men of that mess. At the next mess huge platters of steak were ready to be served. Still another, fresh fish and boiled potatoes were being prepared. The fare was as varied as there were messes. At an officers' mess dainty sandwiches and sliced muskmelon were being prepared for visitors. The camp has electric lights, gas and water piped in, huge water bags with canvas covers rendering the drinking water cool and sanitary, hung by the mess tents. Shower baths are provided for the men.

Among the visitors at the camp from Glendale who went down to visit relatives were Mrs. D. W. Nicoles, wife of Lieutenant Nicoles, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Packer and Doris, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Baker and son Frederick and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Hinshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Grist and daughters, Esther and Eileen, Miss Leota Snyder and guests, Mrs. Ella Richardson, accompanied by E. W. Richardson, Paul and John Richardson, Miss Eula Richardson and their house guest, Miss Ann Jeffries, of Princeton, California, and many others whose faces are familiar in Glendale, but names are not known.

The 21st's stay at Dead Man's Island is uncertain. They are comfortably housed in wooden barracks.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Rand of 237 South Howard street, whose son, H. Chase Rand, is in the 20th, did not know that visitors were permitted at the camp and are much disappointed that they did not go.

HOME METHODS OF FOOD PRESERVATION

By W. V. Cruess, Assistant Professor of Zymology in the University of California.

The series of short articles that will appear in this paper on methods of canning, drying, salting, fermenting, candying, etc., of fruits and vegetables have been prepared by the University of California College of Agriculture to meet the popular demand for information on these subjects and for methods specially suited to California conditions. The University has published a number of circulars and bulletins on the same subjects, but these are limited in number and do not always reach those most interested.

The methods described are designed for home use, but the underlying principles apply equally well to commercial processes of food preservation.

Publications:

If information further than that given in the following articles is desired, write the College of Agriculture, University of California, Berkeley, for any or all of the following publications.

Circular 158. Home and Farm Canning.
Circular 108. Grape Juice.
Circular 146. Jellies and Marmalades from Citrus Fruits.
Leaflet. Salting of Vegetables.
Leaflet. Canning Fruits without Sugar.
Leaflet. Fruit Juices.
Leaflet. Jelly Stocks.
Leaflet. Drying Winter Vegetables.
Leaflet. Canning Fruits in Jars or Wax Top Cans.
Leaflet. Canning of Fruit and Vegetables.
Leaflet. Preservation of Fresh Eggs.
Leaflet. Canning Vegetables in Jars and Wax Top Cans.

Also write the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for Farmers' Bulletins 841, The Drying of Fruits and Vegetables in the Home; Canning by the One-Day Method; and also 175, 203, 426, 293, 259, and 521.

"Any rattlesnakes around here?"

"What's your business?" asked the boy with the big straw hat.

"What has that to do with it?"

"Well, the last man who looked around here for summer board, asked me a lot o' questions like that, an' when I told him there wasn't any rattlesnakes or mosquitoes or anything, he said he was a naturalist an' he guessed the place wouldn't suit him."—Washington Star.

"To what do you attribute your remarkable health?"

"Well," replied the old gentleman, "I reckon I got a good start on most people by bein' born before germs were discovered, thereby havin' less to worry about."

TUJUNGA

The adjourned meeting of the R. R. commission was again adjourned until August 29th at the Glorietta school house.

Mr. Paul of Stephens way is contemplating a trip lasting over several months to Oregon and to his old home in Iowa.

Mr. Darlington has returned from his trip to Catalina Island.

Mr. Dunn of Stephens way is employed in San Francisco, and his wife will soon join him there.

Mrs. Warren is visiting with her daughters in Los Angeles.

Miss Emma Kraft had the misfortune to lose her fine Nubian goat Dryad after three days' illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Crooks and daughter were callers at Tujunga on Wednesday.

The pumps at the pumping plant have been repaired and every one is getting plenty of water for irrigating. As this is the first time we have been short of water in five years, we have surely no right to complain.

Mr. Duke, wife and children are staying for a few days at Dr. Wilkinson's tent on Michigan avenue.

Mr. Forcher of Fullerton was in Tujunga looking after his place on Summit avenue which is under Mr. Kirshman's care. He was pleased at the growth of his trees and carried home some fine peaches.

A tree that is quite valuable as a fruit producer and one that makes delicious jellies and jams is the Persian mulberry. The fruit is larger than the blackberry and minus the hard seeds. The tree is a beautiful, globular shape and makes fine shade during the summer. The branches are more stiff and unyielding than the white mulberry. It is said at least one tree of this kind should be planted in every grove of white mulberries, when used as feed for the silk worms, as its leaves contain tonic properties very beneficial for the worms. Those who have them, delight in the fruit. They are easily propagated by cuttings in the spring.
